From The Dean

Most people find it challenging to continue their education after committing to a career. It is made even more challenging by the poor economy. They take precedence over practically everything, even family time. For working people, Central University of Manhattan provides a compelling alternate approach. They can handle all three aspects of their lives—work, school, and family—in one location. Anytime they want, they are free to study at home. Our credit transfer facility can also significantly speed up this process.

We are all working together at Central University of Manhattan to make education accessible to everyone. The improvement of education in all of our academic fields is a top priority for our knowledgeable and passionate faculty members. Together, we are committed to improving and progressing this globe.
